

MEDIA RELEASE

Q Station Comedy Club Promises Laughs in the Laundry House

Sydney's former quarantine station is preparing to unleash a hilarious succession of talented comedians with this month's launch of the Q Station Comedy Club.

Within the historic surrounds of its old laundry house, Q Station will showcase stand-up comics and performers from around Australia for two-hour shows on the third Thursday of each month.

The debut show on March 18 will offer three acclaimed acts – Acropolis Now star Simon Palomares, Footy Show guest Clint Paddison and musical comedian and Spicks and Specks contestant Jackie Loeb.

The monthly shows will offer a changing program of guest acts including well-known comics and new talent, staged in conjunction with A-List Entertainment.

Located within the Sydney Harbour National Park at North Head, Q Station is an award-winning heritage retreat offering boutique harbour-view accommodation, tours, dining and events.

It occupies the heritage buildings and grounds of Sydney's original quarantine station which operated for more than 150 years as a defence against disease outbreaks.

Tickets to the Q Station Comedy Club cost $44 per person and can be booked by phone 02 9466 1551 or online at www.moshtix.com.au. Audiences arrive at the site's main gates at 8pm for transfer to the venue for the 8.30pm show. Dinner and drinks available at extra cost. See also www.qstation.com.au

Media information:

Jon Murrie/Libby Moffet

MG Media Communications

02 9904 0011

Released: March 8, 2010